

The background of the page features a stylized illustration. In the top right corner, a small bird with a yellow head and a red beak is perched on a green leaf. The rest of the background is filled with a pattern of overlapping green leaves and stems, creating a textured, naturalistic feel. The text is centered and uses a bold, black, sans-serif font.

Call for Papers:
Many Facets of the 21st Century
Environmental Ethics
1st October 2017 – 14 th February 2018

The 21st century is the time of a deepened ethical awareness of ecology. Among the topics that have been gaining more and more recognition are the ethical issues connected with restoration ecology, sustainability, the importance of insects (bees, for example) for the environment, the environmental impact of the fashion industry or of the meat and dairy industries. A notable example of a relatively new ethico-ecological topic is the ethics of space: according to some ethicists, we can no longer think that ecology is restricted to the condition of our planet alone.

Apart from gaining recognition within the academic discourse, some of these topics are becoming increasingly popular on the level of everyday functioning and lifestyle choices. Such lifestyle choices may be connected with what one eats, with the way one travels during holidays or commutes on a daily basis, with buying local goods instead of those transported internationally, with reducing the amount of waste one produces (the zero-waste lifestyle), or with buying clothes that have been manufactured without causing environmental damage. In fact, we are faced with a multitude of new everyday practices motivated by the ethical concern for the environment, and these practices in themselves are worthy of research.

The editorial board of Etyka invites authors of various academic backgrounds to submit original papers discussing the ethical dimension of different environmental topics that are relevant to the times we live in. The issues discussed above are just a sample. The contributions can utilise and combine various methodologies of philosophy, sociology, anthropology, psychology, and other disciplines. Their approaches can be theoretical, conceptual, normative, empirical, comparative, or historical.

Manuscripts should be submitted in English or in Polish at etyka@uw.edu.pl. They should not exceed 6000 words, with an abstract (in English) of 150–250 words, and should be formatted as described at <http://etyka.uw.edu.pl/en/information/for-authors/> (in English) or <http://etyka.uw.edu.pl/informacje/dla-autorow/> (in Polish). Manuscripts will be peer-reviewed anonymously. Therefore, if the authors would like to make references to their own works, they are asked to do this only in the ultimate draft of their article (once the text has been accepted for publication); the initial draft sent to peer review should not include such references.

Manuscripts will be evaluated on the basis of relevance, clarity, and originality. Submitted articles should not have been previously published nor currently under consideration for publication elsewhere. For further information please write to the volume editor, Joanna Iwanowska: joanna.karolina.iwanowska@student.uw.edu.pl.